Brazil have been given a difficult draw for the 2010 World Cup and will face Portugal, North Korea and Ivory Coast, regarded by many as Africa's best team.

England will meet the United States, Cameroon face the Netherlands, and Germany will play Australia and Ghana.

European champions Spain were given a relatively kind draw and will take on Switzerland, Honduras and Chile.

The draw for the 32-nation tournament was made at a ceremony in Cape Town broadcast to more than 250 million people worldwide.

There were gasps in the audience when three of the strongest nations - Brazil, Portugal and Ivory Coast - were put together in Group G.

"It's a very interesting group," said Brazil's coach, Dunga. "Against Portugal, with their style of play and their players it will be like Brazil against Brazil.

"The big question mark is with North Korea. I will have to take a close look at them. Ivory Coast - they are very strong side."
