Brazil sees economy surge by 9%

Brazil's economy grew at its fastest rate in at least 14 years in the first three months of 2010, official figures have shown.

Its gross domestic product (GDP) surged by 9% compared with the same period a year earlier.

However, higher interest rates and the withdrawal of some tax breaks are expected to cool growth eventually.

Brazil's economy is the largest in Latin America and the eighth-biggest in the world.

Agriculture and industry were among the growth sectors, the government said.
